As you look at the track record below you can see how the system works out. We use at the money binary options which is roughly a 100% return per trade.

You can augment your vanilla option swing trading with the use of these NADEX binary options. On your average you pay what, 5,000 10 contracts?

And here when you swing trade NADEX you only need to clear a couple few points or no points if you go slightly in the money while targeting your at the money position. So what does that mean?

That means firstly if you go slightly in the money you put premium decay on your side. This is like you are selling options in vanilla options. If you don't know, NADEX binary options when in the money, you get premium decay melting profits into your account so that becomes an advantage.

The underlying asset can just sit there and when you're in the money your profits will just start increasing and increasing all the way to expiration and then you get to keep all the profits when you hit expiration.

Also with vanilla options you need to have the underlying asset actually move and achieve point distance. Here with NADEX weekly binary options you don't need the underlying asset to move so it makes it easier to make money.

And let's get back to the money invested example. In order to buy one contract of NADEX that will cost $50. 10 contracts cost $500. 100 contracts cost $5,000. For vanilla options 10 contracts cost $5,000 on average for swing trading.

So we have a 10-month example below where we have twenty-two net wins. This comes out to approximately $110,000 on 100 contracts. $550,000 on 500 contracts and $1,100,000 on 1000 contest where you would look to work up to that overtime depending on where you're starting out in your trading account.
